Pope Receives Jews For 'Fruitful' Talks; 2 Issues Unresolved

By Loren Jenkins CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy-Pope John Paul II met here Tuesday with international Jewish leaders to defuse the dispute he triggered by granting an audience to President Kurt Waldheim of Aus-mis earlier this summer. Representatives of both the Catholic and the Jewish delegations in talks that one participant termed "friendly, timely, positive and fruitful" expressed satisfaction that important progress had been made in reducing tension that had threatened to mar the pope's visit the United States this month. The mere fact that the pope would meet with them in a "giveand-take" conversation, rather than a formal audience where prepared statements are exchanged, was considered significant and even historic by the Jewish leaders.

"This was a very important meeting," said Rabbi Mordechai Wasman, chairman of the international Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultations. "It raises the Catholic-Jewish relationship to a new plateau and makes possible a better relationship in the future."

On two main issues raised by the mostly-American, nine-member delegation from the committee, however, there was no agreement: the questions of why the pope met with Mr. Waldheim and the Vatican's refusal to recognize the state of Israel.

"We respectfully have different views," said a committee member, Rabbi Gilbert Klaperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America. "We agreed in our discussions to disagree agreeably."

When the Waldheim audience was announced, the Vatican said the pope was receiving Mr. Waldheim, at the Austrian's repeated request, as the elected leader of a mainly Roman Catholic country.

The Jewish delegation, which had talks with senior Vatican officials Monday and earlier Tuesday in Rome before meeting with the pope for 75 minutes at his summer residence, had been invited because of Jewish protests after the pope's meeting June 25 with Mr. Wald-

Under his gavel, the city has legalized the sale of ice cream cones, provided more public toilets, built new stairways down to the beach and expedited previously stalled efforts to expand Carmel's library.

Mr. Eastwood has proved to be a shrewd political operator, appointing the publisher of the local newspaper, a potential source of criticism, to a vacancy on the City Planning Commission and a prominent critic of his policies to another. He seems to have taken his job seriously.

Seldom a week passes when the mayor is not photographed conducting his ceremonial duties, such as presenting a citation to a city employee for dedicated service or accepting a donation for local youth Even his critics say the mayor is likable and eager to do a good job. Yet some Carmel residents are urging him not to run for re-election when his term ends in April because, they say, his celebrity status is attracting more tourists than can be absorbed by the mile-square city, which even in pre-Eastwood days was a popular weekend destination. "As a human being, I think the mayor is affable, an absolutely unpretentious person," said Jim Holliday, chairman of the Carmel

KARUNGA, Mozambique The rusty ferryboat, loaded with Red Cross supplies and too many passengers, made a serpentine course on what they call the River of Good Signs, chugging past fla-mingoes and pelicans and lone men in dugout canoes. The boat pulled up to a flat, muddy bank lined by a crowd of people suddenly gathered under the coconut paims.

There were young mothers so thin they could scarcely nurse their infants, men whose spindly legs stuck out from tattered shorts, children with hollow eyes and distended bellies. They are the displaced persons of Mozambique's continung civil war. They are here amidst the stucco ruins of a Portuguese settler's farm to be sustained by gifts of Western grain, clothing, soap and medicine.

PORTO AZZURRO, Italy (Reuters) — Six armed convicts barricaded inside a prison on the island of Elba for more than a week released all 28 of their hostages on Tuesday and surrendered, an official statement said. The surrender ended Italy's longest prison revolt for at least 15 years. Prison officials said the hostages were unharmed and had been reunited.

The inmates, all convicted killers, had barricaded themselves inside an infirmary last Tuesday after seizing the hostages. The prisoners, including neco-fascist Mario Tuti, were armed with two pistols, knives and about 57 gallons (200 liters) of alcohol and explosives. They had demanded lives of the condemned men.

The two men were were Moses Jantjies and Wellington Mielies, who were convicted in the "necklacing" murder of a black township council man near the eastern Cape Province city of Uitenhage on March 23, 1985 and the killing of five members of his family. Necklacing is the execution ritual in which a gasoline-filled tire is hung around the neck of a persor and ignited. The method has been used to kill people suspected of having collaborated with the apartheid system.

realize that too much automation can lead to potentially dangerous inattention on the part of human monitors, according to John K. Lauber, a research psychologist with the National Transportation Safety Board. Mr. Lauber specializes in the on-scene investigation of the causes of air crashes, like the 16 near Detroit.

. The human factor is primarily responsible for almost two-thirds of commercial jet aviation accidents, according to federal figures. But until recent-ly. Mr. Lauber told The New York Times, aeronautical engineers held that the human factor was an unquantifiable and therefore uncontrollable variable which, in time, would be eliminated by technology.

But psychologists have come tend to lose both interest and

"Ninety-nine percent of the time, that doesn't lead to trouble; the automated systems handle everything just fine," Mr. Lauber said. But "when something does go wrong, then you need the human involvement."

Instead of computers doi more and more of the work while humans passively monitor them, computers should be used to monitor increasingly active and involved humans. "This," Mr. Lauber said, "is the new frontier in aviation."

"Japanese like this image of themselves as a harmonious, nonlitigious society, but it's more a myth than anything else," said Isaac Shapiro, a partner at Skadden, Arps. Slate, Meagher & Flom, who grew up in Japan and whose law practice includes Japan. More than twice as many suits were filed last year as 10 years ago, suggesting that whatever taboos on litigation that do exist are breaking down, said Nobuyoshi Toshitani, a professor of law at the University of Tokyo.

Mr. Toshitani argued that many elements in the Japanese legal systern discouraged suits and promoted settlements.

"In one word, the Japanese legal system is bankrupt," he said. He says he believed that the government had a deliberate policy of encouraging conciliation that had ample historical precedent. In the Tokugawa period, from 1603 to 1867, for example, the authorities severely discouraged suits. In the 1920s and 1930s, when the number of suits shot up, the authorities changed laws to require concilia-

There were two sessions in one month, and each session was for a full day."

In 1985, it took an average of 12.4 months from the time a civil suit was filed in Japan to its final disposition; last year the median length of time for civil suits in the U.S. District Court system was seven months.

For the most part, the longer a suit takes, the more willing both parties are to accede to settlements. Last month, a settlement was reached in a 15-year case in which victims of Japan's worst coal mining disaster, in 1963, had filed suit against Mitsui Mining Co.

Pressures to settle are built into the court system, Mr. Toshitani said. Each level of the court has a special conciliation division, and in family court all disputes must be subject first to conciliation before any suits may be filed. Judges often recommend, and preside over, compromise settlements.

Rather than pursuing a case in which a court decision could set a legal precedent. Mr. Toshitani said, many judges say they prefer a settlement because it is a truly peace-

The Marcos program, intended to counter the same insurgency now plaguing Mrs. Aquino, was a limited effort that left untouched the large sugar, coconut and pineapple plantations that are at the heart of the land issue.

The effort failed partly because Mr. Marcos was unwilling to take on the 50 to 60 powerful families that control much of the Philippine countryside and partly because the government lacked the machinery needed to implement the program effectively.

New YORK — Publishers with names like Pharos Books, Hill & Co., Thunder's Mouth, and Acropolis are still a long way from rivaling Random House and Simon & Schuster, but they and other small U.S. book publishers are be-ginning to make their presence felt in a big way. Small presses will publish more books this year by name authors and on important subjects, than in any recent year.

Pharos recently published "The Hill & Co., of Boston, will soon publish "A World Too Wide," the latest novel of Gregory Micdon-ald, who created the Fletch mysteries and has written 18 books, most of them for major publishers.

Smaller houses, which have low overheads and therefore can turn a profit on fewer sales than the maors, have been signing up midlist books. Such books can earn a modest profit for a small house even with printings that usually run under 5,000 copies; authors of midlist books receive advances of less than $5,000, although their royalty rates are generally the same as those paid

Furthermore, a growing number of authors are choosing to be published by smaller houses rather than continue trying to interest big publishers in a midlist author.

Baker, undernourished, underrated.

Trumpeter Chet Baker: Excess and Anguish

By Mike Zwerin

nul Herald Tribune Pof jazz — excess, anguish and sorrow are his stuff. Underrated, undernourished, his own worst enemy, plaintive, lyrical, resourceful, enduring and endearing, Chesney H. Baker represents a spooky affirmation of the human spirit. Chet Baker placed 13th, last, in the trumpet category of the 1987 Down Beat critics poll, published last month. The same critics voted Teddy Wilson and Thad Jones, both recently deceased, into that magazine's Hall of Fame.

Baker speculates that he might be understed because the world of jazz "may not be ready for a redneck trumpet player" - he was born in Oklahoma - or that maybe he makes it sound too easy. Baker clones play lean lines with a similar introverted sound, but a close listen reveals a large distance. His choice of notes and their articulation puts him in a place of his own. His lucid melodic constructions are closer to Lester Young than to Miles Davis, to whom he is often (unfavorably) compared. However, it's feeling above all - out on the West Coast who's going to eat you up."

Fame came in 1953 when Baker joined Gerry Mulligan's groundbreaking piano-less quartet. He won Down Beat, Metronome and Playboy magazine polls throughout the '50s. He also sang with a lost little boy voice ("My Funny Valentine") which attracted groupies. A pretty country boy with doomed carma, he was compared to Bix Beiderbecke and James Dean. Fueled in part by the "great white hope" syndrome, he could have been a contender. He generated a considerable cult following. After his good friend - and by now fellow myth - the pianist Dick Twardzik died of a drug overdose at 24, Baker also began to suffer from drug-abuse, critical backlash and public indifference. He spent several years in an Italian jail on a narcotics conviction, lost his teeth in a San Francisco brawl, learned to play with dentures (a torturous process) and started a comeback with a highly praised Carnegie Hall reunion with Mulligan in 1974. Reviewing it, the critic John S. Wilson wrote that Baker had developed "more range and assertiveness within the wistfully ruminative style with which he has always been associated."

look out, there's a little white cat when off, it's more frustrating than disastrous. His career cannot be called orchestrated. He records whenever he needs money. There are too many Chet Baker records in the bins. The odds are against the uninformed buyer. Two albums on Criss Cross, a Danish label, can be recommended: "Chet's Choice" (1985) with the Belgians Philip Catherine on guitar and Jean-Louis Rassinfosse on bass (including a stunning "Love For Sale") and "Blues For a Reason" (1984) with the tenorman Warne Marsh. They showcase Baker's trademark contrapuntal lines with Catherine and Marsh, reminiscent of Baker with Mulligan.

The surprising interest in jazz on the part of the post-punk generation has included a modest Chet Baker revival. He solos on Elvis Costello's "Shipbuilding." The young rock singer Chris Isaak admires him as "the real thing." Most of his work is in Europe. The French like him. An ex-sideman says: "Chet tends to leave for the next gig in the wrong direction. He'll come to Paris from Brussels by way of Amsterdam, for example, on time if all goes well. Sometimes the pay wasn't what it was supposed to be, or when, but there were so many magic moments, they made everything else worthwhile."

A Fragmented Drama of AIDS 'As Is'

By Sheridan Morley

International Herald Tribune ONDON — Early in 1985, when the fullhorror of the AIDS catastrophe had finally dawned on the United States, two plays about it opened in New York within weeks of each other.

Far and away the better of the two was Larry Kramer's "The Normal Heart, in wares and pain, at nalistic scream of rage and pain, at the crisis had thus far been mal Heart," in which a great jour-which indicted Mayor Koch; President Reagan, The New York Times and sundry other public monu-ments for coming too little and too late to the rescue of a gay commu-- nity that had already been decimat-

A year ago. Martin Sheen - brought "The Normal Heart" to the Royal Court and now, the only - other AIDS play of note to have congred from the disaster has its British premiere at the Half Moon. Why it should have taken William Hoffman's "As Is" more than two vears to reach London is hard to estimate, given that, in contrast to Kramer's play, this is a 90-minute : closet drama of extreme good taste which manages to pussyfoot around its awful subject while demanding no great political or social change of heart or attitude.

Indeed Hoffman does not wish "As Is" to be considered primarily as an AIDS play at all, labeling it "a love story" and wondering whether Ibsen would have liked "Ghosts" to be known primarily as a play about venereal disease. It is a brave question, because "Gnosts" is a masterpiece about many things and "As Is," despite Chris Bond's agile production, remains an oddly sketchy, fragmented and unfinished attempt to do poetically what Kramer realized could only be done factually at this stage in a continuing tragedy.

Hoffman's central figures are Rich (nervily well played by George Costigan), an upwardly mobile young writer, and Saul (a butch, avuncular David Fielder), the discarded lover to whom Rich returns when he discovers that he is dying, Around them, all played by a versatile supporting quintet, Hoffman has ranged relatives, nurses, doctors, friends and social workers, most of whom are inclined to give cozy little chats to the audience in the absence of any real dramatic conflict.

At its best, "As is" manages a kind of nostalgia for halcyon Fire Island days and nights before the gay community had to start examining itself for suspect skin patches, but a desperately coy and aimless sentimentality ultimately denies Hoffman his claim to timelessness, while also defeating any hopes that he might have anything to say about the reality of a situation he started to write three years ago

He and his director, Kenneth Branagh, have had the entertaining notion of a solo show set in Napoleon's nursery, during which we are told the story of his life and campaigns from pre-birth ("a soldier should always march inside a stomach") through to a megalomaniac retirement spent installing traffic lights on Elba.

Along the way, Sessions offers a vast range of esoteric parodies from W.H. Auden to Hegel, all seen as threads in the rich tapestry of the Napoleonic saga before the little emperor dies to the strains of Edith Piaf regretting rien. It is a funny idea, made coherent by Session's There are moments of terrible resemblance to a talented junior

The official Xinhua News Agency said that 120 scholars will present 70 papers about Confucius, the 6th century B.C. philospher whose teaching have influenced China, Japan, Korea and other parts of Asia for 2,500

Confucian thought was denounced by China during the leftist 1966-76 cultural Revolution as feudalistic, but authorities now support the study of Confucianism as an important element of Chinese culture. Confucius was a humanist whose thought embraced filial piety, a strict tudy, peace and harmony. State Councillor Gu Mu, in opening the conference at the city, which is in eastern China, said Confucius crystallized the Chinese culture and order of relationships within the state and family, and a life devoted to deology, and belongs to the whole world. Gu said China fell behind other countries in the world in its late feudal period because of its traditional culture, Confucianism in particular. He said in striving for progress China must inherit the best parts of its traditional culture including Confucianism, and adopt what is good in

Help Shore Up Aquino

Stability is always hard to build after a revolution, and particularly in a country that is poor, even by Third World standards. Corazon Aquino's democracy in the Philippines is under challenge from both right and left. Great numbers of Filipinos evidently believed that the corrupt Marcos autarchy was an important part of the explanation of the country's condition and reasoned that its overthrow would bring a great and dramatic change in their standard of living. But while the economy has been growing, the improvement has not yet been substantial. Mrs. Aquino is struggling with the sense of disappointment that is the aftermath of revolutionary exphoria.

The attempted coup by dissident soldiers last week was the fifth since she came to office 18 months ago. On the left she faces not only an entrenched communist insurgency but increasingly radical labor protests. Two days before the coup, the left organized the first general strike since the revolution. It was a demonstration against higher fuel prices and took place after Mrs. Aquino, in response to a wave of transport strikes, had already rescinded half of the increase. The size of the strikes suggested that the left, badly beaten in the legislative elections in May, is gaining strength by exploiting dissat-isfaction with slow economic progress. Gasoline is not a commodity that ought to he subsidized by the government of a country whose people are mostly peasants, and mostly in great poverty. But the cities are sensitive to its price, and in this test of wills the organizers of the strikes were able to throw Mrs. Aquino off balance. In the last few days she seems to have recovered, under the far greater pressure of the dissident offi-cers' plot to overthrow and, it appears, to assassinate her. Now that she has the initiative again, what is she to do with it?

Economic growth is going to be crucial. The United States, with Japan, the World Bank and others, is sending aid. There is a strong case for sending more of it, and for purposes that will show effects more quickly.

Otherwise there will be a rising danger of a vicious circle as slow economic growth aggravates political disorder, and as political disorder frightens off the kind of investment, by both Filipinos and foreigners, that is required for faster growth. If the rich countries of the world want to show their support for a new democracy under great strain, this is the moment to do it. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Miners Didn't Lose

A labor strike that lasts three weeks and produces a contract only marginally better than could have been had without a strike ordinarily would be considered a failure. Yet Cyril Ramaphosa, the leader of South Africa's black mine workers, smiled Monday, and rightly so, as his members returned to the gold and coal pits.

An adversary explained it best. "To take very large numbers of people out on strike and keep them out for three weeks is an achievement," said Bobby Godsell, chief of labor relations for the Anglo American

Corp., South Africa's mining giant. The achievement is all the greater when the deck is stacked in management's favor and workers have nothing to sustain them except their own fervor and sense of mission. By holding the line against such odds, the black miners demonstrated that if they cannot yet shape a settlement, they can inflict great costs, Such power commands respect. No previous strike by the five-year-old

National Union of Mineworkers had lasted even 48 hours. This one was a success from the outset, when more than 200,000 black miners walked out to back a demand for a 30 percent pay raise. The average black miner carns $250 a month, a third of what white miners make for the same work.

Eventually, more than 250,000 black miners joined the strike and closed down or disrupted production at half of South Africa's gold mines and a quarter of its coal mines. The mining companies may have lost as much as $225 million.

The union suffered too. Nine miners were killed, 300 were wounded and more than 400 were arrested in strike-related violence. But discipline held sufficiently strong.

In the end, the union accepted wage increases of 15 to 23 percent, the amount initially offered by management. The only concrete gains from the strike were improvements in holiday pay and death benefits. These benefits are not negligible; hundreds die in South African mines each year. Monday, at least nine men died when an elevator plunged to the bottom of a mine shaft.

In perhaps the most critical part of strike strategy, the union leadership had the wisdom not to give the South African government an excuse to intervene, as some bardliners would have liked. Mr. Ramaphosa indicated in recent interviews that he was under no illusion that economic justice for blacks was ultimately achievable without political justice. But for the moment, they must be pursued separately and incrementally. So the union leaders could say, credibly, that the strike and the settlement were not a defeat, but "part of the struggle to win all the demands that have been set. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Africa: AIDS Puts a Deadly Lid on Population Growth

By Peter Bridges

WASHINGTON — AIDS has spread so fast in Africa that Western analysis are scrambling to decide whether overpopulation still re-mains the huge cloud on Africa's hori-zon, or whether an AIDS pandemic may leave the continent severely un-derpopulated in this century. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome has spread so fast that many of the millions of Africans now infected have never heard of it.

U.S. intelligence analysts recently concluded that underpopulation will be a greater problem this century than overpopulation. That may seem a convenient conclusion for an administration that argues against the need to support family planning pro-grams. Still, the forecast of an African pandemic is not only convenient but, sadly, bolstered by fact. Statistics on AIDS in Africa are inadequate and misleading. A majority of AIDS cases reported to the World Health Organization come from the United States, but health officials believe Africa has more cases and more people infected. In some regions, enough is known to suggest a ghastly picture: As many as 25 percent of adults in parts of Rwanda may have the AIDS virus. It is estimated that half the people of Kampala, Uganda, could die of AIDS in the next decade.

Most of the African victims seem to be heterosexual and not drug users. British researchers report that a high percentage of Africans possess a genetic variation that seems to leave them especially defenseless against the virus. But there are other reasons.

Many African children have contracted AIDS: many were given blood transfusions for malariacaused anemia, only to get AIDS from contaminated blood or syringes. And a year ago, doctors were reporting that 60 percent of all prostitutes in Kenya - and 90 percent in Rwanda - had the AIDS virus. Not all African countries have been hit equally hard by AIDS. Somalia has less of an AIDS problem than neighboring Kenya. The Somalis frown on promisculty, and render it more difficult through the horrendous practice of female infibulation. Another reason may be genetic dif-ferences between the Somalis and the

The Gurgles You Hear From Dixie

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON —On the morn-VV ing after Senator Sam Nunn announced that he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination, that other notable noncandidate. Mario Cuomo, was on the phone to this reporter. No. the New York governor was not reconsidering; far from it. His message was that even without the Georgia senator, the Democrats have terrific candidates. "An embar-rassment of riches" was his phrase. and he said it without laughing.

But what really caught my ear was his casual remark that he would probably announce his own favorite in February. The AFL-CIO, the largest U.S. labor organization, is likely to reconsider its delayed endorsement decision right after the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses and the Feb. 16 New Hampshire primary. Would it not be interesting if the Democratic Party's most prominent governor and its largest in-terest group threw their weight behind the winner of the New Hampshire primary, in which Governor Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts is the early favorite, just as he heads into the March 8 "super primary" involving 14 Southern and border states?

The gurgles you hear in the back-ground are from the designers of the super primary, choking on their own naïveté. They persuaded all the Dixie legislatures to set up primaries March 8 in hopes of diminishing the impos-tance of Iowa and New Hampshire ey into educating Africans, at the and reducing the influence of the party's liberal interest groups and leaders.
It was always a dubious idea, as at least one prominent Dixie Democrat, Don Fowler. South Carolina's veteran national committeeman, kept say-ing. Now, with Senator Nunn gone, it is likely to backfire on the moderate conservatives who designed it.

There had been no rain on the Daror for two years — and we hoped for a downpour. But all we knew was that per of that primary. That might have been all right, had there been a South-erner who could, as Jimmy Carter did in 1976, sneak off with a plurality victory in New Hampshire. But the architects of the "Southern strategy" neglected the most vital ingredient. They failed to secure a candidate.

Former Governor Charles Robb of Virginia, an assiduous promoter of the super primary, told those who urged him to run, "I'm not ready to be president." His modesty was appealing, but it did not help. So Mr. Nunn became the South's white hope, until he, too, backed out.

THE Western world has, until now, tended to concern itself little with the You cannot blame him. Defense political or economic health of Africa, perpetuating instead a superficial issues, his forte, have never been useful view... in part because of perceived self-interest in thus maintaining their own-economic and political dominance. We are entering an era, however, in which even the United States is having to recognize global economic independence... It may not be long before the need to strengthen African economies in peacetime campaigns. People are happy to have a president who under-stands the technicalines of the defense budget, but they do not want to hear him explain them in every speech. The Africans, meanwhile, will need to dispense with myths they hold dear, not cautious Georgian knew that many of his domestic policy views placed him far outside the mainstream of the naeast because in doing so they will start a process that will in itself dispel the surviving myths about them in the Western world. It is the Africans who need urgently to shed their blinders about the essential challenges of economic, tional Democratic Party. He was skepsocial and political development. They must come to accept that an unjust tical about whether the Washington international order will not change simply because of the euphony of their establishment figures urging him to run could actually deliver delegates at the Democratic convention. It is late in the game for anyone else to get into the race, so the power brokers of the South will have to make do with three border-state contenders: Senators Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Joseph Biden of Delaware, and Representative Richard Gephardt of Missouri, all of whom have more than once lapsed into liberalism.

The odds are that many conservative whites in the South will decide they would have a better chance of finding their kind of president in the Republican primary. In eight of the Dixie states they are free to vote across party lines March 8.

The more of them who leave, the higher the proportion of blacks and liberals remaining in the Dixie Democtatic primaries - and that portion is high already, as Mr. Fowler un-availingly has pointed out.

That should help the candidate
Mr. Cuomo and the AFL-CIO find in New Hampshire. But he will be hard put to beat the Reverend Jesse Jackson of South Carolina, surely the one Southerner the designers of the super primary did not aim to assist.

Mr. Jackson is waging a nonracist George Wallace campaign — blasting multinational corporations and greedy Wall Street operators; appealing to the sense of injustice and insecurity among farmers, textile and steel workers. taxi drivers and beauticians.

With those folks voting, his populist rhetoric and appeal to blacks give him a real shot at zooming into the lead in the Democratic delegate race March 8. The Southern primary will not settle the identity of the Demoto reflect on the flaws in their scheme that are likely to boost Jesse Jackson, the candidate with the least chance of carrying Dixie in November.

Laxalt's Try Falls Short

To understand why Paul Laxalt decided phone from big givers and by direct mail to leave the presidential race last week, from the small ones. Vice President Bush consider the figure $9 million. That is the has raised $9 million — even more aides sum raised as of last June 30 by George Bush, Mr. Laxalt raised $814,000 -a lot by the standards of not too many years ago, but not enough, in Mr. Laxalt's view, to get him to his goal of $2 million by Oct. 1. So late one afternoon he bowed out.

When the campaigning for the Republican nomination began last year, each candidate was trying to establish himself as the logical successor to Ronald Reagan. Mr. Laxalt is often called Mr. Reagan's best friend in politics, and has been one of his most loyal supporters since they were gov-ernors of California and Nevada 20 years ago. He won the support of some key Reagan campaign aides. But he did not do so well among Republican contributors. Each candidate has been trying to raise money from approximately the same universe of Republican contributors, by telesay, than he expected - while Bob Dole and Jack Kemp have raised $3 million each. Against this competition, Mr. Laxalt decided that his $814,000 was a losing hand.

The constituency of Republican moneygivers, thanks to the party's efforts over the past 10 years, is a broad one. Mr. Laxalt's supporters can argue that Republican contributors would have been wiser to give Mr. Bush less and Mr. Laxalt more, and they can complain that Mr. Bush started earlier and with other advantages. But everyone knew the rules from the beginning.
Since the Iran-contra scandal broke, the Republican race has changed from a contest to claim the Reagan mantle to an argument over who is best qualified for the presidency in his own right. This is the right argument, and it is far from over.

Time to Pack Up the Cameras

South Africa is winning the war of images, and that is changing the way the entire world looks at the human struggle there. In the name of more accurate and sensitive coverage, perhaps the time has come for Western news organizations, specifically American network news operations, to say "enough" to the government in Pretoria and to pick up our marbles and go home.

The current state of emergency, in effect for more than a year, severely limits what publications and broadcasts can say. More significantly for television, the rigid prohibitions extend to pictures. We cannot broadcast or even shoot pictures of any unrest, which is defined by South African authorities. We cannot show police or security forces acting in their official capacity trying to "keep the peace."

The point is not what the media can no longer do, it is what the public no longer sees. The American consciousness about South Africa was formed and maintained by the constant relevision images of brutal repression: the image of the padded, faceless policeman, club raised; the image of a black youth with fear covering his face.

Yet the recent strike by black miners was reported almost as a routine labor story. Never mind that workers have been herded out of company-owned housing and sent away. Never mind that miners have been shot and killed by authorities under mysterious circumstances. Because we cannot see pictures of these incidents, it is harder to comprehend what is going on. I wonder if the American people wouldn't be better served if the networks were thrown out of South Africa or just left on their own. There would probably be many sources for pictures of the events that we can no longer legally record or broadcast. We smuggle pictures out of Afghani-stan. We could do the same in South Africa. Pretoria knows that. Perhaps that is why we are still there. - Richard M. Cohen, senior producer of foreign news for CBS Evening News, writing in The New York Times.

Laudable Moderation in Seoul

The news that South Korea's main political parties have agreed on the outlines of a new constitution is an important step in restoring democracy. The agreement demonstrates a spirit of compromise that is essential if the country is to achieve its first peaceful transfer of power when President Chun [Doo Hwan] steps down in February. Diligence has won South Korea well-deserved industrial success. Moderation is needed to achieve the same politically.

N EW YORK — The Iran-con-tra committees may be forgiven their disappointing performance. They probably could not have functioned if they had faced up to the uncomfortable truth: The American constitutional system may be in deep trouble.

Understandably, they focused on an important secondary question: What structural defect of government allowed President Reagan to circumvent Congress, and apparently the law, with impunity?

Congress should locate and repair the defect so it can again collaborate with the White House, as an equal, in deciding foreign policy and approving covert operations. The transparency of the truth is what makes it difficult to face. The Iran-contra debacle is only the latest national security crisis that the United States has experienced since the Vietnam War period. Congress has held hearings on national security problems and passed the War Powers Act, the Freedom of Information Act and various amendments to the original National Security Act. among other reforms. Their salutary purpose has been to tame the national security establishment — to bring it into line with the constitution.

Whether this is possible, however, is the question that the committees. went out of their way to avoid.

The nation's Founding Fathers clearly assumed its impossibility. They envisioned no greater threat to republican government than a large, permanent military organization. Their writings on the subject are dogmatic: Republics, in their view, inevitably collapse under the weight of an organization so inherently authoritarian, repressive, wasteful and truculent.

By Albert Fried

United States, despite numerous wars, kept faith with the Founding Fathers. After each war, however long and painful, the country would disband its army and navy and retire its officer corps, save for a tiny cad-

But America has undergone a radical transformation since World War II. The national security establishment comprises far more than a vast, ever-burgeoning military apparatus: It so permeates life that it seems to be as durable as the government.

would settle their own conflicts by means of a republican governme that they had won from the jaws of despotism. But should the same citizens engage in international intrigue and entangling alliances, they would cease to control their lives. They would be at the mercy of chance in a chaotic universe, and the republican virtues would be for naught ment of racial, religious, ethnic and other immorities, not to say women, America is more open than ever.

And no one denies that the United States finds itself in permanent international conflict, and thus in a wilderness of entangling alliances. When the conflict worsens, the national security establishment is called into action on the president's orders. It determines what time-honored rights may have to be restricted or sacrificed. For examole, it has abused the authority of the FBI and the CIA.

The national security establishment defines, ideologically as well as militarily, the exact nature of the conflict and the appropriate re-sponse to it. Trailing behind is the constitution, eager to catch and em-brace the audacious officials. This is just what those inveterate pessimists. e framers, had anticipated.

A modicum of their pessimism enables us to predict the outcome of the Iran-contra committees' deliber ations. Congress will gract reforms that give it more of a say in the conduct of foreign affairs, especially at the covert levels. But future presidents and their minions, zealous patriots all, will disregard, if they cannot easily bypass, any laws they think inimical to America's security. Secondary constitutional questions will again arise and outrage the public. The country will again pun-ish the wrongdoers, including the president if necessary. America will again congratulate itself on proving the depth of its commitment to the constitution. And the national secu-

You He Sifting the Ashes in Arcadia From D To See What We Can Save

By A.M. Rosenthal

N EW YORK — The house that burned down in Arcadia, Florida, was our house. The fire put our own lives in peril and it is we, you and I, who now must search through the ashes to see what can be saved.

This is the only sane and practical way Americans can look at the fire last week that wiped out the home where three little boys who had the AIDS virus lived with their parents.

It is not known yet whether the fire was caused by arson or was an accident. If it was arson, it probably was the work of one or two individuals, not the entire town. Perhaps it was an accident, just a terrible coincidence. Either way it focused the attention of the country on Arcadia and one American family, to which the plague of AIDS brought the plagues of hate and ignorance. The family has had a bellyful, a lifetime full, of hurt. They were driven from their church congregation. School gates were closed to their boys and they suffered the entity and threats of their neighbors. They believe the fire was arson and they are going to leave Arcadia. But the rest of us cannot leave Arca-dia; it is part of our lives and futures

now. To leave - to turn away, forget or diminish it as something that happened in one small farm town in one county in the state of Florida — would not simply be cruel-hearted; it would be stupid and self-destructive. It would give up in advance the one weapon most important in the struggle against the plague, the weapon of individual ethic and responsibility. Without it, we are lost. Chifford and Louise Ray have three sons, 8, 9 and 10 years old, who suffer from hemophilia. It is an inherited disrase that prevents blood from clotting. Treatment of the disease requires transfusions of blood products. It was through these transfusions that the three hoys were infected with the AIDS virus.

That must have happened at least three years ago, before the virus was identified and steps taken to prevent infected blood from getting into supplies for hemophiliacs. Those with the virus live with fear of getting the disease itself: if they do, they die.

The virus can be transmitted through blood or semen in sexual intercourse with an infected partner. In the United States, the sexual infection is almost always conveyed through intercourse with an infected homosexual partner. It is not only a homosexual problem; in Africa the plague is also heterosexual. The incidence of heterosexual transmission is rising in some European countries. And AIDS is spread through exchange of infected blood, usually among drug addicts using the same needles.

In Arcadia, the local school board barred the boys. Their parents lought and a federal court opened the gates. There was a boycott: The mayor and others took their children out of the school. Threats and warnings came, then, on Friday, the fire.

As Jon Nordheimer of The New York Times reported, Arcadians think of themselves as quite decent and ordinary, and perhaps they are. That is what makes it so frightening. Quite decent and ordinary Americans simply ignored all scientific and medical adice that there was no chance of their children getting AIDS from the Ray boys and made them pariahs, driving them from school and church.

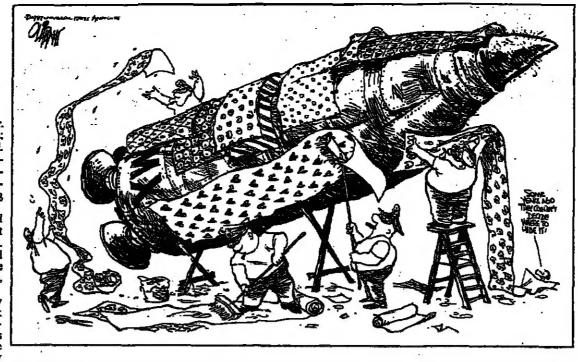

Suppose one of the Ray boys had ebleed and some other child touched the blood with a wounded hand. There is no known case of a hemophiliac ever transmitting the virus this way. The theoretical possibility does not justify the social excommunication of a family except to those fearful and selfconcerned to the point of neurosis.

AIDS specialists say that the greatest current priority in the fight against AIDS is to educate against the danger of setting it - and the danger of unjustiied fear of contamination.

Against those who spread AIDS through narcotics or prostitution, and who may be beyond reason or ethic, the recourse of society is the law. But the one great truth of the plague is that the most effective way to fight it is for every person who believes he may have been exposed to be tested and then for those who have contracted the virus to make the ethical decision not to have sexual intercourse with the unaffected.

Without this individual commitment. the plague will spread. But to persuade the individual to carry out this ethical commitment, society cannot ostracize, punish or hound the sufferers.

That is the social compact of compas sion and self-interest between the sufferer and society that must be created to bridge the years, perhaps decades, before a cure or vaccine is found. Until compact we are all in Arcadia.

Behind the Mecca Rioting

Your reports on the Mecca riot and, I must say, my journalistic colleagues writing about them, seem to have missed what is the most important factor behind that tragic event.

This is that the confrontation was not essentially — I repeat, essentially — just between Iran and Saudi Arabia, or between Sunni Islam and Shiism, but between Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his cierical regime and the word of God as given in the Koran. In the holy book it is forbidden to indulge in argument or disputation or anger or violence during the hajj, which is a religious occa-sion and a time for prayer and peaceful devotion. That has been the traditional behavior of the hajj pilgrims for 1,300 years. But Ayatollah Khomeini and his followers have deliberately rejected not just the traditional hajj behavior but the Koranic injunctions themselves by staging political demonstrations. This is why the mass of Sunni Moslems worldwide, not involved in the Saudi-Iran dispute, have seen the Iranian action in Mecca as a heretical desecration.

This also means that the original mistake was made by the Saudis seven years ago when, as guardians of the holy places, they should have insisted on the Iranian pilgrims obeying the Koran and so refused them permission to hold any sort of political demonstration during the hajj. This year the Saudi authorities did try to persuade the Iranians to conform to correct hajj behavior. Thus, when they reached agreement on guidelines for the demonstration (which was a wrong step in the first place) they said that 10,000 demonstrators should wear the ihram, the simple white garment of the pilgrims. Presumably they hoped this symbol would remind the Iranians to behave like pilgrims. The Iranian rioters ignored this stipulation, many turning up in khaki uniforms. When rioting started, the Saudi police used loud-speakers to remind the Iranians of the Koranic rules, but it was too late.

The biographical note on Mushahid Hussain, author of the opinion column "An Eyewitness Account of Mecca's Bloody Afternoon" (Aug. 24), whom I know personally, should have mentioned that he is a Shiite and that he is an ardent supporter of the Iranian "revolution." These are personal facts but relevant to any assessment of his account. Incidentally, I have seen no explanation of how more than 80 Saudi security men got themselves killed, many with stab wounds. Were these self-inflicted.

In response to "The Reports of American Economic Decline May Be Premature" (July 16) by Robert J. Samuelson:

While it may be true that "U.S. per capita income remains well above levels in Japan and Europe," this says nothing about the distribution of this income.

America's Two Nations

Great inequalities distort the figures; one must compare not only per capita income, but the percentages of people iving at the poverty level or below. During the 28 years I have lived in Western Europe, it is my distinct im-pression that the United States has become two nations: the modern industrial one in which many Americans live quite well, and a very sizable developing country characterized by slums such as are scarcely found in Northern Europe, unemployment, illiteracy, lack of access to primary health care and. in some places, woefully inadequate public transportation. Such conditions would not be tolerated in the wealthier European countries.

The Tyranny of Team Play: Breaking the Rules to Win

By Albert Ritzenberg

provided us with allegories that help us understand the greater game of life - its temptations, tribulations and triumphs. But now sports may be teaching us a terribly wrong lesson.

The Duke of Wellington, we are told, was convinced that the Battle of Waterloo "was won on the playing fields of Eton." The sportswriter Grantland Rice believed that God keeps score in life and the final judgment is based on "not that you won or lost, but how you played the game." The football coach Vince Lombardi, who is mistakenly quoted as saying, "Winning isn't everything — it's the only thing," did say, "Winning isn't everything, but wanting to win is."

MEANWHILE

More recently, another concept rooted in sports, the value of "team play," has become a staple of applied morals, taught with inspectional accentions in the properties of the propertie with unquestioned acceptance in American schools and in the sports world.

Watching a well-drilled team, it is easy to understand the meaning, and the attraction, of being a "team player."

Cooperation is essential to success. Players are responsible to one another and do not let their teammates down. They learn their designated roles and perform them with precision. Praise comes to the unselfish person — the basketball player who forgoes glory by not attempting a low-percentage shot, passing off instead to a teammate who has a better chance.

In individual sports, by contrast, contestants are responsible mainly to them-selves, and they play by the traditions and ethics of the sport. (Sadly, some of these traditions and ethics are eroding as sports becomes big business.) In tennis, except for rare occasions, the individual player not only is trainer, coach and contestant but occasionally is umpire, too, making close calls that can determine the outcome of a game or a tournament. Wearing these many hats requires the utmost discipline and honor. On crucial decisions, there is great temptation to call a play in one's favor, but it rarely happens. In team competition, calling a foul on one's self is unheard of. We would collapse in astonishment to see a football player approach a game official and say, "I stepped out of bounds when I caught that pass, though you couldn't see it from your position." His teammates, in a communal call for unity and team spirit, no doubt would knit their shoelaces into a ASHINGTON — Sports has long oversized neck from the nearest goalpost. Team spirit demands that, in most instances, players cannot let down their mates, even in observing their own codes of conduct. I have seen individual sports, when played on a team basis, turn in the same direction.

In college, my tennis teammates frequently complained about another team; they felt it miscalled an inordinate number of decisions. Years later, when I was a college coach, we had the same school on our schedule, and again my players complained that its varsity frequently cheat-ed. Finally, as the father of a college varsity player, I saw my son's team play that same school, and once more there was cheating. I saw one opposing player run into the net, yet fail to announce, as is proper and usual, that he had done so and should lose the point. One of his faculty advisers saw this violation but justified it by saying something to the effect that the player's opponent was foot-faulting. The team pressure was so great that the player was breaking the rules of honor to win, and his superiors were condoning it.

Statesmen and politicians constantly expound on the merits of being a team player. Do they mean that someone who and chears to further the team is performing an honorable duty? Should a team player keep quiet about a crime because it is his own team that is guilty? Should whistle-blowers be harassed for "ratting" on the team instead of going along with its corruption or inefficiency? This is an age of wrongdoing: Watergate, the My Lai massacre, corporate scandals, the Iran-contra affair. How many of those involved in these scandals justified themselves as team players?

Teamwork at its best — cooperation and assistance for one another in a worthy purpose — is highly meritorious. But team athletics can too easily become destructive. Mob psychology and peer pres-sure are extremely strong, and individual-ism can be smothered. A person who is not made of the very strongest moral fiber may find himself or herself showing the worst aspects of team sports: jus going along and never rocking the boat.

The message is important for parents. They should think carefully before pushing children into team sports. Esprit de corps is fine, as long as it does not deprive Prices lell in active trading of American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter issues.

"There is no way to justify Tuesday's 85-point swing," said Hugh Johnson, head of the investment policy committee at First Albany Corp. Analysis said a sharp bond market decline that put long-term bond yields at 9.25 percent, their highest levels this year, depressed stock index futures prices, which triggered the stock market's slide. "The bond market showed no life whatso-ever; it was unable to shake off inflation fears,"

He said that futures-related selling exaggerated what otherwise might have been a 10- to 15- al closed up 1/2 at 16%.

EW YORK - On the premise that teen-agers are more sophisticated than the magazines aimed at them, John Fairfax Ltd., Australia's powerful magazine company, is starting Sassy, the American version of Dolly, sful monthly for the teen-age market.

Like Dolly, Sassy is aimed at people 14 to 19 years old. It attempts to be more contemporary in its fashion approach than other U.S. publications and more direct about such issues as sex-The prototype issue, for example, has an article entitled "Sex for ing Ms. Barr's conviction that teen-agers are increasingly aware, is "I'm too Sassy to read Toen."

Ms. Barr said advertiser response had been positive. A four-color page costs about $6,950, and Sassy is gnaranteeing an initial rate base of 250,000, hoping to build that to 400,000. But the magazine's frankness may have pinfalls. Leo Scullin of Young & Rubicam thinks that there is a niche for a new publication but that one challenge will be to overcome the puritanical nature of the American mother. Teen and Seventeen are highly successful, he said, and "they respect the Protestant ethic and the nature of the country."

Grey Advertising, in its first commercial for Mitsubishi's new Galant Sigma, has avoided close-ups of the $20,000 car. Instead, the car races sleekly through a crowded tunnel, then swerves dramatically onto a mirror-like surface.

"We didn't just want pictures of just another pretty car," said Peter Serchuk, vice president at Grey. "We wanted to emphasize

In the $15 million ad campaign, Mitsubishi is primarily challenging the Honda Acura, which sells for about $23,000. The strategy is to offer a luxury car with more options for less money.

In July, members of the Publishers Information Bureau, reprenting most of the country's largest magazines, carried a total of 9,312.27 ad pages, a 6.4 percent increase over the previous year. Estimated revenues for the month were $320.6 million, a jump of 7.9 percent compared with July 1986.

Britain's WPP Group has acquired two more American communications concerns, Reese Communications Cos. and Targeting Systems, both in Arlington, Virginia.

Recse specializes in issues marketing, and Targeting Systems has been involved in commercial marketing, especially in demographic and attitude research. Both were created as consulting firms for political candidates, then began to serve corporations and associations. Combined revenues of the companies in the last fiscal year were about $14.4 million.

Bénéteau Turns Rudder Toward U.S. No. 1 Yacht Maker Wants More Than a 6% Beachhead

By Steven Greenhouse

SAINT-HILAIRE-DE-RIEZ, France — When Annette Bénéteau Roux became chief executive officer of Beneteau, she was 22 years old and the company, which produced modest wooden fishing boats, was on the brink of going under.

Mrs. Roux, now 45, has brought Chantiers Bénéteau a long way since then. She has transformed the operation that her grandfather founded in 1884 into the world's leading manufacturer of sailing

But she sees one big problem. Her company holds only a 6 percent share of the U.S. yacht market, which is by far the world's largest. To keep Bénéteau at the top of the $900 million yacht industry, Mrs. Roux says that the company needs to raise that to 15 or 20 percent.

"My biggest wish is to succeed in the United States." Mrs. Roux said. "We're aiming for the Americanization of Bénéteau." To that end, the company this year opened a $3.5 million yacht assembly plant in Marion, South Carolina, one of the French industry's first overseas plants.

The American competition is ready to prevent Mrs. Roux from expanding her beachhead. "Beneteau is going to have a far tougher time achieving what it would like to achieve in the American market because there's a renewed feistiness and aggressiveness on the part of many American boat builders," said Roger D. Hewson, president of Sabre Yachts, a leading United States boat builder based in South Casco, Maine.

The French yacht maker, based in this verdant resort town of 8,000 south of Brittany, made its mark by emphasizing sleek new designs and modern production methods at a time when most of the industry was snoozing. Bénéteau wowed the sailing world with trend-setting sailboats carrying price tags so low that they attracted customers who never thought of themselves as potential yacht

"When you're in the boat business, you're somewhat in the toy business," said Jeff W. Napier, president of the International Council of Marine Industry Associations. "When you offer something new and interesting, like Beneteau did, you'll at-tract the consumer's attention."

Indeed, the Bénéteau juggernaut has put dozens of European boat builders out of business, and some Americans as well. Officials agree that no single outfit has shaken up the sailboat industry the way Bénéteau has.

The world was ready for low-cost, attractive, mass-produced yachts," said J. Richard Johnson, the editor of Yachting World. "They marketed with an image far livelier and younger than the bouts in the U.K. and U.S. and they went off like a

The result: Bénéteau, which is 72 percent family-owned with the rest traded on the Paris Bourse, has grown by 20 percent a year over the past decade. The company had revenue of $91 million last year and employs 1,100 people, up from $250,000 in revenue and just 17 employees when Mrs. Roux took the helm in 1964.

Although many builders turn out just one or two zen yachts a year. Bénéteau makes more than 5,000 boats annually, ranging from 23-foot (7-meter) vessels priced at $15,000 to 51-footers that cost $300,000. The Bénéteau story is all the more impressive

FRANKFURT - After six months of stagnation, the West German economy expanded a stronger-than-expected 1.5 percent in the second quarter as private consumption soared, the Federal Statistics Office said Tuesday.

It was the first growth registered in West German gross national product since the third quarter of 986. The figures, which are preliminary, are subject to revision and are adjusted for inflation and seasonal factors.

GNP measures the total output of a nation's goods and services. The return to growth had been signaled last week by Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, who said that the second-quarter figures indicated the economy could still attain the government's forecast of 2 percent GNP growth for 1987. German GNP grew 2.4 percent in 1986 and 2.5 percent in 1985,

Many private economists, how-ever, called Mr. Bangemann's prediction politically motivated and overly optimistic. They predicted GNP growth of between 0.5 and 1.5 percent for the year.

The economy is growing again but much of the growth can be seen as recovery from a terrible first quarter," said Peter Pietsch, an economist at Commerzbank AG in Frankfurt. "For the year, we see no grounds to change our prediction of I percent GNP growth."

Preliminary figures also released Tuesday showed that the GNP grew 0.8 percent in the second quarter from its year-earlier level.

Without adjustment for seasonal factors. GNF growth would have been only I percent in the second quarter from the first three months, the spokesman said. He also said skewed because of the unusually robust 3.5 percent growth recorded in the second quarter of 1986.

The second-quarter figures confirmed government and private economists' contentions that higher private consumption has replaced exports as the economy's driving force.

Consumer demand for goods rose 2.3 percent in the second quarter from a year earlier and was up 3 percent from the first three months of this year.

The Deutsche mark's strength against the U.S. dollar continued to weigh on the export sector as exports of goods and services fell 2.6 percent in the second quarter compared with the 1986 period, but were up 25 percent in the second quarter from the first. Imports were unchanged in the second quarter from a year earlier. after rising 5.9 percent in the first quarter. But imports climbed 6.5 percent in the second quarter from the previous quarter,

LONDON - Britain's deficit on its current account, the broadest measure of trade, widened sharply to £310 million ($505 million) in July from a downward revised £140 million shortfall in June, the Department of Trade and Industry said Tuesday.

The July figure, which was more than £100 million bigger than most analysts had expected, reflects a continuing deterioration in Brit-ain's overall trade position in the second quarter of 1987. The June current account delicit was originally reported as £168 million.

The merchandise trade figure the major component of the current account, widened to a seasonally adjusted deficit of £910 million in July, from a downward revised £740 million in June, as imports that the year-to-year rise was continued to grow faster than ex-

Atlas said it estimates the cash costs of closing the uranium operations will be substantially less than the $2.5 million a year that it has been spending to maintain the operations on a stand-

The company also said it has found gold at its Gold Ridge project in Nevada, where drilling to date indicates at least 100,000 ounces of probable geological gold reserves, exploration is still going on, atlas said.

The cost of the uranium shutdown includes reclamation costs and other liabilities and expenses.

Atlas said it expects sales of uranium inventories under an existing contract and proceeds from the liquidation of uranium-related assets to largely cover the closing and reclamation costs related to uranium operations.

Continental, Eastern Reject Increases in Discount Fares

NEW YORK - Two carriers owned by Texas Air Corp., the largest U.S. airline group, have decided not to go along with a move toward higher air fares by other major Eastern Airlines announced Monday that it would actually out its lowest discount fares. Continental Airlines, meanwhile, said it would sit out the latest round of increases on discount fares initiated by others in the industry, including United Air Lines, Delta Air Lines, American Airlines and Northwest Air-

Analysts said the moves by Eastern and Continental threatened to set back attempts by the rival carriers to raise fares during the traditional bull in air travel following the Labor Day holidays.

Eastern said that from Sept. 9 through Dec. 15 it was cutting an average of $20 each way from the deep-discount rates known as "maxsavers," the industry's cheapest fares.

based in Fort Wayne, Indiana. The business serves more than a million customers in Indiana, Ohio, Virginia and West Virginia.

IC Industries' Pepai General unit serves eight Midwestern states, with 1986 operating profit of $55 million on sales of $542.5 million. In April, GenCorp announced a $1.6 billion stock buyback as part of a restructuring to defeat a hostile takeover bid by an investor group

The lawsuit charges that any Pepsico attempt to interfere with the sale would harm both GenCorp and IC Industries, that Pepsico is arbitrarily refusing to allow IC Industries to expand into new soft

United, American, Delta and Northwest all announced last week they were raising maxsaver rates by $10 to $40 each way beginning with tickets purchased Sept. 8.

In addition, the airlines tightened advancepurchase requirements on their maxsavers from the previous seven days to as much as 30

In raising their fares, the airlines pointed to rising feel costs and the expected drop in traffic following Labor Day.

But analysts said the key to any major fare restructuring would be Texas Air, which con-trols about 20 percent of the U.S. air travel market and is generally regarded as the industry's pricing leader.

Analysts said the flurry of recent fare actions may start to slow down soon. Julius Maldutis of Salomon Brothers Inc. said. "What this means, net, is there's a slip-restructuring of restrictions on discount fares," said Hans Polciert of E. F. Hutton & Co., "and their reason is perfectly logical. They said, Tet's sit back and wait and see what happens,' based on the fact that fares

As a result, other airlines may raise their lowest fares on routes where they do not compete with Continental but most likely will forgo the increases - as have Delta and Northwest — on routes where they compete directly with the Houston-based carrier, ans-

"BALANCE OF PAYMENTS STRENGTH SETS STAGE FOR GROWTH"

Governor of the South African Reserve Bank at the sixty-seventh ordinary general moving of stockholders of the Bank on 25 August 1987

MALANCE OF PAYMENTS AND POWERSH DEET SEEVICING

It is a matter of recorded history that other employing three gold "borroreor" years in 1999, 1980 and 1981, the South African economy was buffered by a series of adverse accommon composition of polifical developments. These events resided in a withdrawal by foreign banks of credits to South African enterprises from July 1985, a substantial not audition of capital in other forms, a depreciation of the reard, the imposition at the end of August 1985 of a partial debt sandelfill and the simultaneous resimulation of each argue control over near-section and pully investments. Since like them these de facto francial constraints have been reinforced by allective de fare financial and trade sandians imposed by some legislatures and/or governments.

The challenge powed by these adverse developments were doubling indeed. Most services of all was the net capital auditors, including debt repayments, of RLS,5 bition (LLS,77,4 bition) during the two years 1995 and 1996. But the facts now show that the South African economy rate to the occasion and responded with an alread unparalleled demonstration of balance of payments adjustments, strengthesing of the foreign interest, interest servicing and debt repayment. In this way a tolid foundation has now been laid for responded economic expension.

Current account surplus
In 1984 there was still a deficit on the current account of the balance of payments of 12,2 billion. This deficit was transformed into a surplus of 1859 billion in 1985. In 1986 this surplus increased to 1972 billion or 5 per cent of gross demantic product — a high ration by days standard. Present indications are fact, despite the projected in in read gross demantic product and therefore in imparts, the surplus for 1987 as a whole will be between 15 and 16 billion (outview U.S.$2,4 and U.S.$2,9 billion).

Foreign debt servicing

At the end of August 1985, when the standard was that imposed, the total foreign chief of the South African economy amounted to U.S.$237 billion. By the end of December 1986 this figure had declined to U.S.$200 billion, valued at the debt well-near representative the prevailed are imposed and has continued other the end of 1984. All in all, the South African economy has now repoid about U.S.$4,3 billion of foreign debt since the end of 1984. Of this amount about U.S.$400 million represented repayments "mide the ret". The remaining amount of U.S.$24 billion included net repayments in out to be supplied and the ret in the remaining amount of U.S.$24 billion included net repayments "mide the ret". Exchange values
From a low point of 35 US quite on 12 June 1986 the communical rand appreciated to 50 US cents on 20 May 1997, before declaring to its present hard of around 48 US cents. Against a trade-weighted located after a content stands about 28 per cent higher than on 12 June 1986. The financial rand also moved up from about 18 US cents of one stage in June 1986 to a peak of 35 US cents on 1997, before receding to its present level of crossed 28 US cents.

MONETARY AND RECAL STRATERY

To what must the improvement in South Africa's external economic abusinants or contributed?

One season was the seasonful mainternants of low and order, and the resultant improvement in overseas perceptions of the South Africa's situation. Another factor was the rise in the gold paids from an exercise of U.S.$37 per curvae in 1995 to U.S.$386 per curvae in 1995, and to on overseap thus for in 1997 of U.S.$394 per curvae. Clearly, however, a recipie role was also played by the manetary and faced policies peaced from roughly the middle of 1995, including this Reserve Bank to action in rusing Bank rate by 3 percentage points to 2175 per curvae on August 1994, which resulted in the prime overdraft rate of international provings to 1995 it was after that the objectives of eliminating overspending and producing a large surplus on the current occurrent of the bodience of polyments had been achieved. These featured as Bank rate in stages from 27.75 to 9.5 per curv. This helped to bring down the prime overdraft rate from 25 per curv to its protection with this policy the Reserve Bank has since May 1995 read at the stage of the 1995 and on the prime overdraft rate from 25 per curv to its protection with this policy the Reserve Bank has since May 1995 read at 30 per curt for the rate of introduce of the broad maney supply (M) between the form prime overdraft rate from 25 per curv to its protect lead of 1925 per curv.

These interest rate declares have been fully reconstitute with effective curved of the money supply. In March 1995 the Reserve Bank, with the concurrence of the Minister of Frances, set a larger range of 16 to 20 per curve for the code of three been fally reconstituted with effective curved of the house for the broad maney supply (M) between the fourth rate from 25 per curve of the broad maney supply (M) per control to the fourth reserve Bank has streamed below the target range of 16 to 20 per curve for interest or the fourth range of the broad curve for the fourth reserve Bank in accordance with stage of th

IMPSOVED BUT STILL SLUGGISH DOMESTIC ECONOMIC

Given the forestructure before of payments and demestic financial developments of the post year, the performance of the "real" demestic seconomy to date has been disappointing. Technically the economy last been in a cyclical upwing ance the middle of 1965. But thus for the promise of a vigorous upward thrust has not been fulfilled. Present indications are then white the growth rate of real gross domestic product will exceed 2 per case in 1967, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the 3 per case in 1969, it may not need the seconomy supports that a major part of the conservabilities in a tack of sufficient business and consumer confidence. The paradox is that the financial sector is expensesing high blood pressure while the real economy suffices from low blood pressure.

Monatory policy will remot expansionary as long as the present situation periods. A new (lower) target range was set in Monato 1997 for the rate of increase of MS of 14 to 18 per cent between the fourth page of 1995 and tell fourther occuleration of real economic growth and a further product decline in the

Dollar Ends Mostly Lower in N.Y.

NEW YORK - Burdened by merwhelmingly bearish sentiment the dollar closed mostly lower Toesday in New York despite minot intervention by central banks in New York, the dollar fell to 8085 Deutsche marks from 8165 DM on Monday, to 141.40 in from 142.45, to 6.052 French james from 6.0705, and to 1.4930 Swiss francs from 1.4985. It also lost ground against the British goind, which closed at $1,6430, against $1,6305. Traders said that the dollar re-reived some early support on limit-West German central bank, or Bundesbank, and the Swiss Na-

Gopalan Nair, vice president in foreign exchange at Drexel Burnham Lambert, said that the Bundesbank intervened to support the dollar when it slipped to the of intervention only stalled the currency's move downward. Mr. Nair noted that the threat of concerted intervention by the centrai banks and tensions in the Gulf maderpinned the dollar's advance in fuly. But market sentiment has become so bearish, the Middle East is now only "moderating the fall,"

In London, the dollar closed at 18130 DM, up from 1.8105 DM at Mooday's close, but fell against the yea, to 141.90 from 142.20. It also slipped against the British pound, which ended at $1.6400, against

$1,6330 on Monday. The market tends to suspect that intervention we have seen lately is a token gesture," one Europe-an dealer said. There was no offidose at 72.8 percent on its trade-weighted index against a basket of last year.

to the economic data. "The dollar actually fell after the indicators, which shows how bear-ish the market is," he said. "The barrel. Britain's North Sea Brent upward revision for June should crude fell 20 cents to $18.45 a barhave helped the dollar."

Earther in Europe, the dollar was fixed in Frankfurt at 1.8116 DM, down from 1.8152 DM Monday, and in Paris at 6.0565 French francs, down from 6.0650. It closed in Zurich at 1.4935 Swiss francs, up from 1.4915. (UPI, Reuters)

■ Oil Prices Slip

Oil prices dropped on world markets Tuesday as concern about OPEC's surplus production overshadowed Iraqi claims that its warplanes hit four oil tankers in the Gulf, UPI reported.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediby 0.5 percent in July against a are, the benchmark U.S. crude for immediate delivery, slipped 10 cents to $19.63 a barrel.

G-10 Deputies Meet Next Week

TOKYO - The deputy finance ministers from the Group of 10 will meet next week i Paris to prepare for the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank at the end of September, Japanese officials said Tuesday. The meeting of deputy ministers will begin Sept. 8 and is expected to last two days, the officials said.

The discussions will include recent developments on the foreign exchange markets, they said, but no substantive decisions on exchange rates are expected.

The Group of 10 consists of ministers and central bank governors from 11 countries: the United States, Britain, West Germany, Japan, France, Canlands. Sweden and Switzerland.

Mrs. Roux put that boat on a trailer, attached it to the back of her car and drove it around the western coast of France. The tradition-bound fishermen scoffed at the novel craft, but pleasure boaters loved it and gave the struggling company all the orders it could handle.

The lesson was not lost on Mrs. Roux, and she decided to steer the company into recreational boats.

In the mid-1970s Bénéteau took the market by storm with its dash-ing racer-cruisers. The boats were lighter and faster, their lines sexier those of most of the competition. The cabins had more light and prettier curtains and were fitted with teak instead of plastic. The and more private.

TRAITORS AND HEROES: A Lawver's Memoir

By Martin Garbus. 305 pages. $19.95. Atheneum, 597 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017.

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

A HANDFUL of American lawyers — Tel-ford Taylor, Ramsey Clark and Martin Garbus quickly come to mind - can often be found defending the rights of individuals in countries that do not enjoy legal freedoms. Ironically, they sometimes come under attack themselves for being on the side of the angels too fervently. Yet their advocacy can lead to catchup justice and telling books.

In Garbus's memoirs about the tribulations and triumphs of representing tough clients and causes, he tells of his involvement on behalf of Breyten Breytenbach, the popular Afrikaner poet who had been put on trial for treason. In 1977, PEN (the organization of writers and editors), the International Commission of Jurists, and the International League of Human Rights asked Continues and South Africa and Rights asked Garbus to go to South Africa and report on the legal proceedings.

Garbus, a former faculty member at the Columbia and Yale law schools, filed a petition seeking clemency for Breytenbach. Later. he reported that the Breytenbach trial was politically charged and judicially unlair.

In a surprising revelation that appears in his admirable "Traitors and Heroes." Garbus writes that the New York City Bar Association, in one of its less heroic stances, threatened to disbar him because he had criticized the South African jurists. After three and a half years, the City Bar Association finally admitted that "there is no basis for taking action and there-fore the matter has been closed." Garbus had declined to remain silent about South African justice before it was acceptable to do so -- a living example of being prematurely anti-

He has worked on behalf of dissidents in the Soviet Union (he carried out Andrei Sakharov's letter to President Jimmy Carter in 1976); as a representative of a group of American lawyers during the treason trial of Chilean officials who had opposed the present military junta; for such American authors as Peter Matthiessen, the naturalist who was sued for Garbus, who previously wrote "Ready for the Defense," regularly defends authors and publishers in First Amendment cases. In his new book, he maintains that Americans ough to be concerned with the personal rights at individuals in foreign countries to speak and write freely. "Even if polarization between the superpowers continues," Garbus concludes the march toward an increased dialogne or individual rights and then a globally enforce able bill of rights seems inexorable."

home. Wallace's brogue is deci-pherable to the few. They learned, nevertheless, to give him what he gave as a kilted army corporal in Malaysia 30 years

Watch the veins stand in Wallace's neck and you cannot mistake his message. But words, many of them, are Azkargorta's weapons. "When I speak to a player about music, literature, cinema, politics, whatever." Azkargorta once explained, "I like to know more than he does. He will then believe I know more than he does about soccer."

It doesn't follow. Azkargoria, who has studied medicine, has been a remedial teacher in a Basque school and has made documenatry films; at 33, he has aiready coached Español and Valladolid. "It would often please me," he admits, "to be a more typical trainer because I would suffer less. When things go well, it is good to be atypical; when things go badly being atypical is a defect."

Quite. Apart from an old knee injury to prove he played, Azkar-goria makes another introspective observation: "Some say I would be more acceptable if I had had less university and more work -if in my free time I went to the easing or the brothels. Presumably then I'd be phenomenal?"

Meanwhile, he gets three days to transform Sevilla — hopeless odds since Betis had hired a new manager, Englishman John Mortimore, a full two months previously. Azkargorta inherits the squaddies of the most earthy of coaches. Sevilla lost, 2-1, on Sunday because of a nervous, possibly confused goalie and despite reasonable performances from Ted McMinn (brought from Wallace's Scotland) and Pablo Bengoechea, for whom Sevilla paid Wanderers of Montevideo $750,000 six weeks ago.

What price language? Indeed, what price culture in the schemes of soccer success? Talent you can buy, philosophy you can change. But to invest so heavily in one direction and reverse it overnight is a manic recipe for success.

Moses, Joyner Win First U.S. Gold Medals

The Assistanted Press ROME - Edwin Moses, the old man of the sport, surged to the front early, then held off Danny Harris and Harald Schmid to retain his 400-meter hurdles title in a pho-10 finish at the World Track and Field Championships Tuesday.

Another American, Jackie Jovner-Kersee won the second gold medal of the championships for the United States, but just missed a world record in the heptathlon. While Joyner bowed her head in weariness and disappointment. Moses was ecstatic after beating Schmid of West Germany and Harris of the United States. Moses, who celebrated his 32d birthday on Monday, strained through the final 10 meters and leaned across the tape to win in 47.46 seconds, .04 seconds under his own old meet record and the fastest in the world this year. "A very difficult race for some-

Harris of the United States and Schmid of West Germany also eclipsed the old record, both timed at 47.48, and Harris just outleaned Schmid to take second place. Schmid's time set a European record.

Schmid, who had to make up the most ground, said he at first thought he had caught Moses at the tape.

"I thought I was in front at the end," he said. "Moses has never been in trouble like this before." Harris said he was happy with the silver medal and a personal

Moses, who, had his 10-year, 121-race winning streak snapped by Harris earlier this summer, stayed on the infield of Olympic Stadium while judges examined the photographs of the finish. When the result was announced to the roar of the crowd, the veteran broke into a broad smile, then climbed into the stands to embrace his wife and his mother. The men's 800-meter event was won by Bill Koncellah of Kenya in a meet record of 1:43.06. Peter Elliott of Britain was second at 1:43.41, and Josè Luiz Barbosa of Brazil third at 1:43.76.

I moved some of the rhododendrons from under the tulip poplar. The tree was hogging what little rain there was and the rhododendrons were just about dead, so I dug them up and moved them to the bed in the back of the garden where I've got the leaky-pipe hose buried so as to keep the soil nice and moist.

Of course when I put the shovel in to dig the rhododendron holes. naturally the shovel blade sliced right through the leaky-pipe hose. "I guess that just about ruins the leaky-pipe hose." I told the woman. "Ruins it!" she said. "That

People think it's funny that blue jays dive at my head when I'm checking the garden to see what's dead. They thought it was funny when President Carter was attacked by a rabbit. I don't know about rabbits, but attack by blue jay, which is an enormous bird, is

To deal with them I get out the hair-spray can and give them a long burst of anti-aircraft spray, as it were. If you can hit them underneath when they're pulling out of the dive, the stuff glues their feathers so close to the torso that they lose mobility in their wings.

"Speaking of charnel house," the boy said, "look at that praying mantis on the brick wall getting ready to eat that grasshopper."

"Not on my brick wall you don't!" I shouted, reaching the grasshopper a split second ahead of the mantis and hurling it over the wall to safety.

"That grasshopper you saved," the boy said, "could breed a plague of grasshoppers that will destroy next year's garden."

"Exactly why I saved him." I said. "If the drought quits, we're going to need that plague to give us a real September.

Underwriters Gripe in Their Tower

By Steve Lohr New York Tonks Service

ONDON - For Lloyd's of London, the 300-year-old insurance exchange, modern architecture is proving a more formidable samble than insuring Betty Grable's legs or the space shuttle.

Long before Queen Elizabeth Il dedicated the new Lloyd's building last November, its hightech, steel-and-glass design — all pipes, pods, towers and tubes made it Britain's most controversial piece of architecture in recent Situated in the heart of the ancient City of London, the $250 million Lloyd's building, although critically acclaimed, has been likened to everything from an oil rig to a coffee pot.

Recently the aesthetic debate has been drowned out by increasing complaints about the building and its working conditions from the underwriters who make up Lloyd's and the insurance brokers who bring them their business.

Some underwriters have even requested permission to move back into the 1958 building across

The Lloyd's management has just commissioned a British polling organization to survey the underwriters and brokers about their attitudes toward the building. The purpose of this study. according to Lloyd's, is to "identify as wide a range of views as possible prior to any decision on major changes to the current ar-

Most of the complaints concern the effect of the buildings multifloor configuration on the day-today working lives of the brokers and underwriters.

Some members of Lloyd's management suspect that the litany of gripes is mainly a smokescreen for a beartfelt asthetic aversion to the building designed by Richard Rogers, the architect best-known previously as co-designer for the Pompidou Center in Paris.

"It's a 20th-century building, and the traditionalists hate it that's the short of the matter." said David Larner, the spokesman for Lloyd's. "After all, we still have people who complain that we never should have moved from the old 1928 building to the one built in 1958."

Indeed, a strain of traditionalism is evident at Lloyd's. Nowedays, for instance, although bowler hats are about as common in London's financial district as rickshaws in modern Tokyo, a few howler hats can still be seen in ing's glossy modernism, some people argue, has far more to do with being British than with being members of Lloyd's, "By and large, the British are a pretty conservative lot, and none of us like change," commented Richard Hazell, an underwriter. "And now this big change in our business

The resistance to the new build-

For his part, Hazell described himself as "bloody ambivalent" about the new building. However. he offered a guarded endorsement: "For me, it's fine because it works. And that's what matters to me. I'm interested in my market - not gazing at the floor or the Complaints about technical failures seem relatively minor air-conditioning flaws, elevator delays, a leaky roof and so on. Most of these problems have been quickly corrected. But the complaints about the new multi-layer trading layout are more substan-

There are four trading levels in the new building, compared with two levels in its 1958 predecessor. The roughly 400 underwriting syndicates, which mostly insure ships and their cargoes, are clus-tered in "boxes," or office stalls, on the four levels surrounding the 240-foot-high (74-meter) atrium. Brokers shuttle among the boxes to bargain with underwriters who buy" portions of the insurance risk that a broker wants to "sell" for an issuer. The basic market structure has changed little from its humble beginnings at Edward

Lloyd's coffee house in 1688. By doubling the number of trading levels, critics say, the new building creates more work for brokers and hurts smaller underwriters. For brokers, the new building means more hopping from one floor to another. And at times, brokers say, the multilevel virtually bursting out of its old spot which underwriting boxes are least crowded with brokers. Smaller underwriting syndicates complain that they now get less "passing" business, generated as brokers pass by among the larger syndicate boxes. The problem is most pronounced for syndicates assigned to the "Himalayas" the fourth gallery — where.

Regardless of the results of next month's sampling of senti-ment by Market & Opinion Research International, there is little chance that Lloyd's will move back to the old building. The rapid growth of the insurance exchange in recent years left Lloyd's
